Before meeting the love of his life, Rex was in trouble. He was an old dog with a shady past, resulting in aggression issues. He was going to be put down, even though his behavioral problems wasn't his fault.

Rex spent his life chained up in a scrap yard. He was likely abused before being taken in by the Puriton Horse and Animal Rescue facility in Somerset, England. As a result, he became an ultra-aggressive canine and wreaked havoc on his previous shelter and other animals in his way...but that all changed when he laid eyes on Geraldine. Geraldine, a goose, was like Rex and had a history of aggression issues. She been abandoned by her previous owners when they couldn't handle her more violent goosey-tendencies.

After Rex and Geraldine met, they became fast friends. Now, because of their relationship, it's been smooth sailing for these abused animals.

We are all consumers and we all would like to live a bit more extravagantly. The problem is that the cost of some of those grandiose purchases will leave a big dent in our bank accounts. If you think they're not in your budget, I have good news! Those lavish purchases are totally in your budget if you think about it this way.

If you save up enough cents per day, you can basically buy anything you want. ... sort of.

journalism has always been an information
problem

This is what we do:

we find out
what matters...

...and deliver it
in a language
people understand.

so: we are designing the news experience & the systems that deliver it
